STEVEN

Wow. You look... stunning.

SAMANTHA

Thank you.

STEVEN

Can you play the Italian fashion model when we get back home too?

SAMANTHA

(sexy Italian)

Forse...

STEVEN

I like the sound of that.

He leans in and they kiss for a beat, then smile at each other. Getting down to business:

STEVEN (CONT'D)

Okay, so I'll enter the club at eleven fifteen, you'll come in ten minutes after. I won't need long to hook Benedetti with the business opportunity, then I'll signal you once he's ready to play.

Steven walks out of the room. Sam calls out to him.

SAMANTHA

Our names are on the list?

STEVEN (O.S.)

Hoyt's taken care of it.

Steven re-enters wearing his shirt, a tight white button down with not enough buttoning up. Samantha cannot believe what she's seeing.

SAMANTHA

You're kidding, right?

STEVEN

What?

SAMANTHA

You're not really wearing that.

STEVEN

You have a problem with my outfit?

SAMANTHA

Does this mirror not work for you?
Can you not see what you look like?

STEVEN

I look like Giancarlo De Luca,
Italian playboy, which is exactly who I'm supposed to look like tonight.

SAMANTHA

You look like a Bee Gee.

STEVEN

Oh please, you never like what I wear.

SAMANTHA

That's not true at all. I --

STEVEN

You know how many times I've gotten dressed only to see you make that face?

SAMANTHA

What fa--

STEVEN

The one where you purse your lips
for ten seconds before you ask me to change.

SAMANTHA

I do not -- look, let's forget what
I think about your home wardrobe -- even your "weekend" shorts.

STEVEN

I told you. They're stretchy and comfortable.

SAMANTHA

We're on an operation. And if Benedetti doesn't believe you are who you say you are, we'll never get close to that ledger.

STEVEN

Let's ask Hoyt what he thinks.

SAMANTHA

Hoyt would think you looked good in a burka. Listen, I know you're very talented at disguise and transformation, but I'm an expert, Steven. Top of my recruiting class at Langley. Let me help you.

STEVEN

Greek shipping magnate, French tennis pro, Viennese violinist. All personas I pulled off before we were partners. I think I can handle this.

Samantha takes a beat, considers this. Then:

SAMANTHA

Fine. You're right. If you were just my partner and not my husband I'd let it go. You look great.

She gives him a sweet kiss. A beat, then, to himself:

STEVEN

That's right. No one tells Giancarlo what to wear.

SAMANTHA

Oh Jesus...
